

Invitation

“Hear my voice!” Making youth participation powerful

European Conference
6–8 October 2014 in Brussels,
Maison Notre Dame du Chant d’Oiseau

Background

In a number of countries, the European Parliament election results revealed an increase in support for nationalist, anti-European and xenophobic parties – some of which now have a presence in the European Parliament. There appears to be a sense of dissatisfaction with what is considered the “European Project” – as well as with the functioning of liberal democracy. This produces a dangerous amalgam that is gaining force in almost every country across Europe. It is therefore time to re-define the participation of young people in a democratic Europe – previously considered a mere nice-to-have option for youth

NGOs and interested youth workers. Learning to participate in practical and effective ways in daily life, and experiencing that one’s opinions and activities can actually shape the political dialogue with those in power, may be a highly effective way to prevent young people from becoming too discouraged and apathetic to make their voices heard in a democratic society. That said, political decision-makers, too, have to learn to open to an early dialogue about political decisions that involves target groups of all ages on all levels. Is that a naïve vision? Or is it the state of the art of good governance?

Objectives

This European conference will discuss the outcomes of two processes: one, the recommendations of the Reflection Group on youth participation organized by the Youth Partnership of the Council of Europe and the European Union and two, the recommendations of the multilateral peer learning project “Participation of young people in the democratic Europe”, a collaborative effort between five partner countries (Germany, Israel, Lithuania, Poland and the United Kingdom) over the past two years.

The conference will compile these outcomes into a set of shared recommendations on youth participation to be handed over to stakeholders such as the European Commission, the Council of Europe, members of the European Parliament, the Council of the Regions and others to give youth participation a major boost for the next few years. The event will therefore assume the character of an intensive discussion and working seminar for international experts for youth participation.

Target group

50 youth policymakers, youth workers, youth leaders, experts in the field of youth participation and civic education are invited to the conference.

Another approx. 60 representatives of European institutions, NGOs, regional representations etc. will be present during the presentation of the recommendations on 7 October.
